

ADVANCE PRAISE FOR 'MAKING GRACE'

"Serves nicely as a primer for lesbian partners considering the same leap." – Variety

"Making Grace is a small, intimate documentary that patiently observes the highs and lows of a 30-something couple who want to become parents...the story of Ann Krsul and Leslie Sullivan is quiet proof that families are indeed created, not mandated." – New York Times

"Drama about the difficulties of pregnancy and the social tension of same-sex families
...compelling." – New York Magazine

"The subject is touchy, but Gund handles it with taste and compassion. From all indications, Ann and Leslie will make excellent, if unconventional, parents." – New York Post

"A film of subtle, ingratiating charm ... Krsul and Sullivan eventually emerge as something resembling loving, responsible poster children for lesbian parenting, but thankfully not at the expense of their quirkiness, neuroses, or humanity." — Onion A.V. Club

"Often humorous, sometimes emotional, and always captivating... demonstrates to the world that love makes a family, regardless of sexual orientation."
- Los Angeles Inside-Out Film Festival

"This film hits all the notes of the wacky, emotional rollercoaster that is making a family. This is not the L Word version of the story; this is authentic reality-television."
– Frameline / The San Francisco Int'l Gay and Lesbian Film Festival

"Intimate." – Cleveland Film Festival
